Introduction

According to Human Computer Interaction module we have to do is to select a UI and UX failed website and prepare the website again after avoiding its flaws. The project started in this semester with the applications proposed by our “Warriors” team members. We choose this lankaland.lk website because there are significant problems in the project we have chosen, and those problems are enough to discuss with the group members. Then we implemented the user interface design. We built our UI as a more complete prototype. We conducted interviews with three stakeholders via zoom and identified more problems with our chosen website. Looking at the tape analysis of the three stakeholders, they said as consumer usability problems as UI designs are not perfect, Font size are not perfect, Details are overloaded, Button sizes and colors are not perfect, and too much white spaces are everywhere discovered. Then we analyzed the users' comments as high, medium or low based on how effective they were. Furthermore, we have identified the problems encountered while using the redesigned website and suggested other options for them.

Methodology

In this web application we created by developing the Lankaland named “lanakaLand.lk” website. So that we identified the issues what are had here, then chosen the user-friendly color themes, and front sizes which user can easily recognized and easy to understand. Then we discuss about which section have to fully develops. So there we identified common issues like front size, color themes as well as rarely issues like unclear images, unavailable images, same format forms for register and login likewise. After that we create some test cases for every interface which we created here. Then we have to create videos for every kind of interfaces to be performed how they works here.

In this project, the web-based application was created for the sell properties to the clients to facilitate high-fidelity models that kind of live software to clients, which suggests users would be more likely to act normally and users friendly. Precisely, Data Analysis is one of the critical activities that ought to be followed after the web application elicitation. For this project, in-depth interviews with relevant inquiries and video transcripts were utilized as information collection strategies. Relevant request are individual and unstructured interviews whose point is to recognize participant's feelings, sentiments, and suppositions with respect to ease of use issues within the interfacing of the chosen web application. As distant as information collection instruments were concerned, the conduction of extend included utilize of a semi-structured survey, which was utilized as relevant request and video transcripts to direct for the project. For this project, Sketching is one of the imperative activities that ought to be taken after before plan tall constancy model for chosen interfaces of the web application. Outlining may be a strategy basically utilized by designers for web and realistic plan projects. Figma prototyping tool were utilized to design high fidelity models for chosen interfacing of the net application. Figma may be a vector illustrations editor and prototyping tool for plan high devotion models.

Summary

In here by project, we have to develop the website for having more usability issues. Therefore, we choose the website called LankaLand as our development website. So that we developed this website 15 interfaces in a human friendly manner. In here by document, we added the interfaces user can use more easily and understand easily without any issue. We changed the color themes and front sizes also while we designed the website. And also used CRUD operation to the website for user can achieve them easily with user friendly manner. As well as we changed the lengthy para in to some short up descriptions with including only necessary things. After that added the tasks and check the designed also has any issues to see. Likewise, we develop this website.
